

Sunday Eve. July 15th 1855

At Home

Dear Friend Bush:-

I did not go to church today, and having nothing else to do, I have hastily written a couple of communications for the "Statesman".

Of course you will, at all times, make such disposition of my communications as you may think best. I shall never feel offended if I do not see them in the Statesman. An editor is presumed to know best what he ought or ought not to publish. But I am inclined to think that you will regard those now sent as acceptable. I have indulged in a little irony. But this was both natural and excusable since the rascals are everlasting slandering and denouncing the Democracy, and particularly, you and myself.

I write with my eye on both the past, present and future. I want to take the wind out of the sails of our enemies at the very commencement of their voyage!

All well, God bless you. As Ever--

Your Obedt Servt.

Delazon Smith

A. Bush esq

Editor, &c.

Sunday eve. July 15th 1855.

At Home.

Dear Friend Bush:

I did not go to church today, and having nothing else to do, I have hastily written a couple of communications for the "Statesman".

Of course you will, at all times, make such disposition of my communications as you may think best. I shall never feel offended if I do not see them in the Statesman. An Editor is presumed to know best what he ought or ought not to publish. But I am inclined to think that you will regard those now sent as acceptable. I have indulged in a little irony, but this was both natural and excusable since the rascals are everlastingly slandering and denouncing the benevolence, not particularly you and myself.

I write with my eye on both the past, present and future. I want to take the wind out of the sails of our enemies at the very commencement of their voyage!

All well. God bless you. As ever -

Your Obedt Servt.

A. Bush is a }
Editor, &c. }

Belagim Smith